PROGRAM DESCRIPTION::

A growing body of research highlights the complexities involved in hoarding disorder (DSM-V, 2013) and its impact on an individual's occupational, social, and vocational functioning. The goals of the study described in this presentation are to understand the clinician and client experience with hoarding disorder in a community mental health team setting, focusing primarily on psychosis related experiences.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES ARE TO:

- 1. Describe hoarding disorder, cluttering behavior, and current best practice
- 2. Identify current evidence for occupational therapy best practice in the context of hoarding
- 3. Identify clinician and service user experiences with hoarding in mental health service contexts
- 4. Identify clinician and service user views about occupational therapy's future role in the management of hoarding disorder and the implications for developing OT approaches in the future.
